

BIOFUND

Friends of BioFund

A circle of people who believe in our work and are willing to say so.

JUNE 2026 · PRIVATE & PERSONAL

WHY THIS CIRCLE EXISTS

BioFund has never been built for visibility. It was built for the work – quietly, deliberately, and with the kind of patience that most organisations cannot afford. Seven families made a commitment not to a market, but to a mission: curing and preventing cancer, for as long as it takes, across species, without the pressure to exit before the science is ready.

For years, that meant keeping the circle small. The platforms were being built. The science was being validated. The structure was being put in place. There was nothing to show that was ready to be seen.

That has changed. The research engine is running. The translational pipeline is active. The platforms – from cell engineering to ultra-fine bioactive processing to early-stage oncology funding – are operational and producing. The websites are live. The team is in place.

What BioFund needs now is not capital or publicity. It needs the right conversations to happen – between the right people, at the right moment. And those conversations almost never happen by accident. They happen because someone who knew about the work thought of someone who needed to know, and made the introduction.

Friends of BioFund is the circle of people willing to do exactly that.

"The most powerful thing most people can do for a cause they believe in is not money. It is a phone call."

WHAT A FRIEND DOES

Being a Friend of BioFund carries no formal obligations, no financial commitment, and no expectation of time beyond what feels natural. It is not a board seat, an advisory role, or a partnership agreement. It is something simpler and, in many ways, more valuable.

A Friend pays attention. When a conversation in their world touches on oncology research, animal health, functional nutrition, biosimilar development, co-investment in science, or the question of what cancer prevention actually looks like in practice – they think of BioFund. And when the moment is right, they make an introduction.

That introduction might lead to a research collaboration. It might lead to a co-funding partnership, a clinical validation programme, a commercial relationship, or simply a conversation that plants a seed. Not every introduction becomes something. But every introduction that becomes something started because one person trusted another enough to say: these two should meet.

Friends are not asked to represent BioFund, to speak on its behalf, or to advocate in any formal sense. They are simply asked to keep the door open – and to knock on it occasionally when someone they know should be on the other side.

WHO WE ARE LOOKING TO MEET

BioFund's work spans a wide range of disciplines and sectors. A Friend's introduction is valuable wherever it comes from – but the following gives a sense of the conversations we are most actively seeking:

- Researchers and clinicians working in oncology, comparative medicine, immunology, or translational science
- Animal health and veterinary institutions exploring novel therapeutic or nutritional programmes
- Pet nutrition and functional food companies seeking credible R&D; partnerships
- Academic departments interested in co-funded doctoral or postdoctoral research
- Family offices, foundations, and impact investors aligned with the OneHealth mission
- Agricultural and aquaculture companies exploring bioactive ingredient innovation
- Anyone building at the intersection of science, prevention, and long-term human and animal health

THE BIOFUND ECOSYSTEM

BioFund operates through seven distinct but interconnected entities, each facing a different audience and serving a different function. A Friend's introduction can find its natural home in any of them:

BioFund · biofund.org

The Family Office. The mission, the structure, and the conviction behind everything else.

BioFund Ventures · biofundventures.com

The portfolio arm. Co-investment opportunities across platforms and programmes, by invitation.

biodeep.ai · biodeep.ai

The cell engineering and biosimilar development platform. Built for our own science, opened selectively to mission-aligned partners.

micronutri.ai · micronutri.ai

The AI-guided bioactive discovery and enhancement platform. Identifying, optimizing, and transforming natural compounds through the UFP500 platform for prevention across nutrition, health, and beyond.

BioFund Animal Health · animalhealth.biofund.org

The animal health and nutrition R&D; arm. Translational oncology, functional nutrition, and open research collaboration.

NORI — Novel Oncology Research Institute · nori.biofund.org

The human oncology arm. Early-stage research funding, academic training, and community prevention programmes.

m-Institute · m-institute.biofund.org

The open innovation platform for ultra-fine natural ingredient development. Global R&D; partnerships across nutrition, health, and beyond.

THE ONLY ASK

If something in these pages resonates — if you find yourself thinking of someone who should know about our work — drop a note, make an introduction, or simply share the link to whichever part of BioFund feels most relevant to them.

There is no pitch deck to pass on. No investor memo to forward. Just seven websites that say, honestly and completely, what BioFund is and what it is trying to do. The right person will recognise it.

No one can do this alone. That is not a slogan. It is the reason this circle exists.

Curing and preventing cancer together.

Because no one can do it alone.

BIOFUND